

HISTORIC BURLINGTON COUNTY PRISON MUSEUM ASSOCIATION
2024/25 Membership Application (through June 30, 2025)

In 1808, Robert Mills, architect and prison reform advocate, was looking for someone to build the prison he had designed to implement his vision of reform. Burlington County needed a jail in Mount Holly to replace the 1760's county jail in Burlington City. The two met. The result -- the key step in prison design for reformation represented by the Old Burlington County Prison, in use from 1811 until 1965. With the possible exception of our neighbor, Eastern State Penitentiary, it is the most significant prison building in the United States.
